SATURDAY EVENING, JUNE 14

Reply to Ingersoll.

Rev. Dr. W. T. Brantly, of Baltimore, last Sunday night preached a sermon in reply to the oration of Col. Robert G. Ingersoll at the funeral cf his brother, Hon. Ebon C. Ingersol!, in Washington city. Dr. Brantly addressed himself directly to the issues involved in the creed of the deceased as stated by Col. luger sell: "He believed that happiness was the only good, reason the only torch, justice the orly worship, humanity the only religion, and love the only pries:" The funeral, Dr. Brantly said, was a singularly sad one, for there the only pries: " The proprietor or proprietors of such lots, his or their heirs, representatives. Bible was closed and there was no voice of prayer heard in the house or at the grave. Flowers there were in profusion, but no recogn pition of the Being that made them. The consolations of religion we are accustomed to seek were carefully excluded. One of the sad things there was that it was the funeral of an infidel. The only officiating priest was a freethicker of the most pronounced type, who has not hesitated to proclaim his sentiments all over the land, seeking to inject his sceptical poison into the minds of the weak and credulous. He was, as it were, a missionery infidel. His speech over the coffin, beautifully worded, has been given just as it came from the mouth of the speaker. The speech has been sent on its mission of evil with every advantage that could be given by beauty of style and choice of language. Suppose men lived according to the theory that bappiness is the only good. The question as to any action by a man would simply be how does it affect his happiness or minister to his erjoyment? The questions of justice, honor or respect for the rights of others are thrown away entirely. What would be our position if this rule obtained in Heaven as well as earth? If Christ in Heaven had only said "I am happy here," he would not for our sake have become the man of serrows and acquainted with grief. Where would be the patriotism and self-sacrific ; under such a creed? But is cason the only terch? Close the Bible and what would reason tel? We should see millions born into the world and merch on and on, and meet the same dark conclusion, called the grave, where they fall and disappear from our sight. Reason gives no answer to the question can a man live hereafter beyond the blind pagan gropings, which say possibly or probably he may. Reason can only disquiet or terrify by its uncertainties, not as to what what will be, but what may be. The torch goes out just where we need itmost. That humanity is the only religion is what an infidel wrote in Paris, and added that death was but an eternal sleep. It is indeed right to be kind to our fellow men, but if that is all of what avail will it be in the hour of death when we need a friend stronger than man? Justice as the only worship might be admissible if men were only just, or for angels who are pure, but for fallen man he would ask justice to be tempered with mercy. That love is the only prices, with the creed put forth, is absurd, for we want no pricet if there is no God, and no sacrifice if there is no sin. He did not wonder with this creed that Col. Ingersoll should say that every life must close with a tragedy, deep, dark and sad, but how gloriously is that repudiated, in the revelation of the Bible, that death with the Christian is only the throwing eff of an earthly tabernacle, under which he groaned, for a "temple not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens."
